WALKING TALL AND RIDING DIRT BIKES

If I could go back in time to my youth, knowing what I know now, led by the Lord, would I make the same miserable mistakes/decisions again? Then, I was blind, but now I see, so I started a ministry. The tools of my ministry are the Bible and some dirt bikes. My riders get the Word, bike maintenance, riding skills, and life lessons. A day of riding will always start with the Word from the Bible, my devotional, and Our Daily Bread. Then, I explain what I've read for clairvoyance. Everything was about me and motocross racing when I was a kid. I idolized anything dirt bike. Now, before every ride, even with my adult riding buddies, I will speak of how God created the heavens and earth. I speak of how He allowed us to create dirt bikes from the resources He made. I speak of the importance of putting the Creator before the creation. Then, I'll give the ride to the Lord and thank Him. "Thank you Lord, for dirt bikes and the skills to ride them." - ministry motto prayer! Next, about two months ago, I got a phone call from Mentor Tony, who told me about Walking Tall. I felt the Lord was speaking to me through Tony. I knew right away I was to look into being a mentor. The Lord and Tom dubbed me a mentor (thank you) and Walking Tall now has a dirt bike program. I have two young men under my wing, Tristan and Jaxon, who are both eager to learn. So far, our primary focus has been rebuilding a trusty XR200R to look and ride as new as possible. I hope to mesh my ministry with Walking Tall to the Lord's glory. If I can't go back to my youth, maybe I can go to someone else's youth, show them the Word, and help them choose a righteous path filled with good decisions and a love for our Jesus Christ. Bill

We don't know what these young men are going through when they arrive at Walking Tall. So, what does it take to inspire them? For this group it's a motorcycle, and we know giving them grace shows them as worthy of love and kindness, even when their behaviors seem selfish. Showing grace to others inspires those around you to emulate you. Bill shares his knowledge but also imitates this grace to the young men.

*The Lord is compassionate and gracious, slow to anger, abounding in love.
