Brothers in Unity

“Walking Tall is a program where we train young men in moral living while teaching them practical life skills.” Tom said the first time I met him. “Although efforts are aimed at the young men, everyone in Walking Tall is blessed!” Now after more than 2 years, I can attest to this firsthand. Walking Tall has provided an outlet for service as well as a fellowship of Godly inspiration and encouragement.

When I came to WT, I didn't know where I wanted to participate. I had some experience in woodshop, construction, and small engine, but I ended up in the metal shop. It's funny I ended up there because that is the area, I had the least experience. But I had an interest in metal and was keen to learn so I jumped in! I felt like I didn't have much to offer but I realized that willingness to learn is exactly what we are trying to teach. We've had some talented mentors come through the metal shop in the years I have been there. I have been able to learn from them and observe the young men springboard off their experience. Since I had the opportunity to learn from these talented guys, I too can now answer some of the questions that are asked in the metal shop!

At Walking Tall our mentors are from a wide range of churches throughout the Valley. Since we are all oriented around the same goal of inputting into young men's lives, the diversity among us serves as a great strength. I like that the young men get to experience the blessings of “brothers dwelling together in unity.” I think this is one of the many powerful, yet subtle lessons to be learned at Walking Tall. Walking Tall is a place where faith is expressed alongside practical work. It's a different way to infuse truth than would be experienced in typical church setting. For the “churched” in our group it proves an additional platform to shine the light. For the young men in our group that are not familiar with church it can serve as an introduction to the things of God. Walking Tall is a family where all levels of faith and experience are appreciated and valued!
