It's Not Just About Me

My experience in Uganda was life-changing, even at such a young age. Our family lived there for two years while we were adopting my younger sister. I thought this experience would be a bragging point to my friends, but it turned out much differently. The culture is so unlike ours; They have little money but give anything to anyone who asks for it. They spend each daily paycheck on meals and usually send their children to boarding school. Even though they really need money, their unbreakable friendships are most important.

Receiving the Walking Tall coin was a great accomplishment for me. I've learned it's not just about me and I represent the whole group. The coin helps me make good decisions, whether towards my siblings or out in public. It encourages my ability to set a good example. I worked with Mark in the junior CAD class, which enabled me to move to the advanced class with Greg, learning 3d CAD design. I like how Greg has a good sense of humor but can distinguish between seriousness and humor, whereas I am the opposite. I'm unsure of my future plans, but I intend to get a job to help put myself through college.

Watching and listening to other young men playing the piano has motivated me to work more and improve my piano skills. I appreciate Walking Tall in general. Without it, I would be hanging out on the couch at home watching tv or playing on my tablet more. The mentors have taught me the importance of being grounded in my faith and work ethic.

Therefore encourage one another and build each other up, just as in fact you are doing.
