AUTOMOTIVE WOODWORKING FABRICATING & WELDING SMALL ENGINE COMPUTER DESIGN CONSTRUCTION AND MORE

Socially Awkward

Silas is currently a student at Corban University in Salem OR, but recently came home and visited Walking Tall. Before heading to college, he shared his experiences during his time in our program. He mentioned that he was working in the computer lab designing parts for a conversion kit from a gas to an electric go-kart. He has been a part of Walking Tall for about seven years and it has helped him greatly with his social skills. Through Walking Tall, he has learned woodworking skills, computer design, respect, basic interaction with other humans, more about faith, and made friends. It has pushed him outside of his comfort zone, which has given him the confidence to approach people he doesn't know and introduce himself. Silas is studying creative writing at college for the next three years as he loves stories. Although he had mixed emotions about moving on, he felt that it was the right thing to do and was looking forward to this new chapter in his life.

Silas said, "Carrying the WT coin with me is a sign of commitment and accountability, and I will continue to have the coin on me."

Silas

Every time you cross my mind, I break out in exclamations of thanks to God. Each exclamation is a trigger to prayer. I find myself praying for you with a glad heart. I am so pleased that you have continued on in this with us, believing and proclaiming God's Message, from the day you heard it right up to the present. There has never been the slightest doubt in my mind that the God who started this great work in you would keep at it and bring it to a flourishing finish on the very day Christ Jesus appears. Philippians 1:6 ~ The Message
