Fish Lake Clean up Day

Fish Lake is where Walking Tall has been camping for many years. The site owners have always been kind and generous to Walking Tall. Unfortunately, heavy storms recently hit the area, causing much damage and leaving its owners without power for many days. The storms knocked down trees and branches, making the sites unsafe for camping. To help the owners, Walking Tall took action to clean up the area before the opening days of camping. They used a backhoe, shovels, rakes, and many hands to work diligently through the cold weather, cleaning, burning, and clearing the roadways. This act of kindness not only helped the owners of Fish Lake but also instilled essential values in the young men of Walking Tall by demonstrating the power of giving back. Despite the cold and hard work, the group still managed to strengthen friendships, have a snowball fight, and do some fishing.
