Competitive Charm

Meet Wyatt, a twelve-year-old who was born and raised in Oregon and lived in Hugo before coming to this area. "He enjoys playing pickleball the most and he sees himself joining the minor league. Pickleball is a fun sport that combines elements of tennis, ping-pong, and badminton, making it easy for beginners to learn. However, it quickly becomes competitive. He says, "I am a competitive person, but having fun while improving is more important to me than winning."

Wyatt has expressed his desire to learn how to adapt to others, even when they are not motivating him. He has learned the importance of fellowshipping with the young men and has developed patience, thanks to his experience with Walking Tall. In the wood shop, he has gained skills in making pens and boxes that are both useful and enjoyable to create. Wyatt is grateful for Tom and his mentor Jeff, who always teases him in a way that he likes.

"Walking Tall is awesome, and I'm excited about the possibility of getting a job in construction. Apart from that, I have an interest in making pens, which requires a great deal of precision and detail. I believe I have a decent level of skill in this area, and if I were to acquire my own lathe and workshop, I could potentially turn this into a profitable business opportunity."

Wyatt woos the ladies by offering to arrange and deliver the dessert himself. His charming and helpful demeanor adds an extra touch of sweetness to their evening.
