Engine Works

Boone's friend Quintin brought him to Walking Tall a few years ago, and he is getting closer to other young men as well.

He enjoys the small engines at Walking Tall and repairs and sells lawnmowers at home. At Walking Tall, Boone has gained a deeper understanding, of knowledge and tools that he doesn't have at home. As much as he loves working with small engines, he is excited about his move into the automotive department. All of these mentors are knowledgeable about automotive, and he wants to become an auto mechanic someday. He had a conversation over dinner at Walking Tall with one of the business owners, who expressed that Boone could come to his business and check out what they do. Boone says, "It's pretty sweet to have this access through Walking Tall."

Boone values the Walking Tall coin because it sets a high standard for him to meet every day, and he takes comfort in knowing someone has his back. He deeply appreciates the mentors commitment to teach the young men, seeing it as a demonstration of unselfishness and a serving spirit.

After graduating, he plans to attend Rogue Community College to pursue a career in mechanics due to his passion for becoming a mechanic.
